SHADOWS.

BY ALICE CARY. When I see the long wild bri rs Waving in the winds like fires, See the green skirts of the maples Barred with searlet and with gold, See the sun flower, heavy-hearted, Shadows then from days departed Come, and with their tender trembles

Weep my bosom, fold on fold. I can hear sweet invitations Through the solemn, sad vibrations Of the winds that follow, follow, As from self I seek to fly-Come up hither! come up hither! Leave the rough and rainy weather! Come up where the royal roses Never fade and never die!

Twas when May was blushing, blooming, Brown bees, bluebirds, singing, humming, That we built and walled our chamber With the emerald of the leaves; Made our bed of yellow mosses, Soft as pile of silken flosses,

Dreamed our dreams in dewy brightness

Radiant like the morns and eves. And it was when woods were gleaming, And when clouds were wildly streaming Gray and umber, white and amber, Streaming in the north wind's breath, That my little rose rose-mouthed blossom Fell and faded on my bosom, Cankered by the coming coldness, Blighted by the frosts of death. Therefore, when I see the shadows.

Drifting in across the meadows, See the troops of summer wild birds Flying from us, cloud on cloud, Memory with that May-time lingers, And I seem to see the fingers Of my lost and lovely darling Wrap my heart up in her shroud.

A Hymn in a Gambling Den.

A gentleman in Hong Kong was intrusted with packages for a young man from his friends in the United States; and, after inquiry, learned that he might probably be found in a gambling-house.

He went thither; but not seeing him, determined to wait, in the expectation that he might come in. The place was a bedlam of noises-men getting angry over their cards, and frequently coming to blows. Near him sat two men-one young, the other forty Circus and Menageries, per day ... 300 00 | years of age.
